

Contributors

---

Paolo A. Bolaños teaches philosophy at University of Santo Tomas and is currently the Chair of its Department of Philosophy. He obtained his PhD in Philosophy from Macquarie, Australia and master's degree in philosophy from Brock, Canada. He also sits as member of the board of the Philosophical Association of the Philippines. He is a specialist on Nietzsche, Adorno, Critical Theory and Social-Political Philosophy.

Jose Federico Lagdameo teaches philosophy at Ateneo de Naga University and is currently Chair of its Philosophy Department. He is now pursuing a PhD in Philosophy at Ateneo de Manila, the same school where he finished his master's degree. His research interests include Foucault, Heidegger, Gadamer, and Hermeneutics.

Adrian V. Remodo is a full-time faculty member of the Philosophy Department of Ateneo de Naga University. He holds a master's degree in Philosophy. He has written works in Bikolano and was given special recognitions including the Premio Tomas Arejola for Literaturang Bikolnon.

Jovito V. Cariño teaches philosophy at the University of Santo Tomas. He obtained an MA in Philosophy from Ateneo de Manila. His interests include Thomas Aquinas and Alasdair Macintyre.

Michael Oliveira is a graduate from FAUP, Faculty of Architecture-University of Porto, visiting student researcher at UC Berkeley College of Environmental Design, and currently volunteer architect at the Columbia University GSAPP's Global Studio-X Rio exploring the future of cities. The article that appeared in this journal was originally submitted during the Theory Workshop organized by the Institute for Cultural Studies—Polytechnic University of the Philippines last April-May 2013.